Welcome to our Newsletter!

Hi, egott -

Welcome to issue #11 of EBG's eNewsletter, Success with Requirements.

This month's eNewsletter features a recent podcast on adapting your requirements practices. This podcast was recorded by StickyMinds as a follow-up to my two-part article on adapting requirements. In this podcast, I explore project factors to consider and requirements elements to adapt depending on your particular project situation. The goal is to do the right things for your project. I hope youll find it useful.

My best wishes to you and yours for a joyous and peaceful holiday!

Resources of Interest

Each month we provide a few resources we think are worthwhile. The resources below are online communities of interest to anyone performing business analysis work. After each, I provide the short description you'll see on their site.

We welcome you comments and suggestions for future issues!

- Catalyze: "Do you define business systems, design software, or create website? If so, Catalyze is a member-driven, professional community for you. Catalyze is a place to share experiences, find resources, ask question, offer opinions, get involved and network with other professionals doing this same creative work."

- Modern Analyst "This community and resource portal

is'The One-Stop-Shop' for the Business Systems Analyst!"

- Requirements Networking Group "in response to a need for the professional development of people who capture and manage requirements for complex and critical systems development projects."
